Popping Corn.

And there they sat and popped corn,
John Stiles and Susan Outer;
John Stiles was fat as any ox,
And Susan fat as butter.

And there they sat and popped corn,
And talked of different kind of ears,
And hatched their chins up higher.

Then Susan she the popper shook,
Then John he shook the popper,
Till both their faces grew as red
As autumn made of copper.

And then they shelled, and popped and ate,
All kinds of fun and sport,
And he hatched at her remarks,
And she laughed at his joking.

And still they popped, and still they ate,
(John's mouth was like a popper;
And stirred the fire and sprinkled salt,
And shook and shook the popper.

The clock struck nine, and then struck ten,
And still the corn kept popping;
It struck eleven, and then struck twelve,
And still no signs of stopping.

And John he ate, and Susan she thought—
The corn did pop and gutter,
Till John cried out, "The corn's a fire!
Why, Susan, what's the matter?"

Said she, "John Stiles, it's one o'clock,
You'll die of indigestion;
I'm sick of all this popping corn—
Why don't you pop the question?"

Humorous.

A BRIGHT boy alarmed his mamma the other day by declaring that "last night all the hens had somehow got changed into roosters." Investigation showed that the hens still existed, but that they had roosted the night before. Mamma fears such brightness cannot remain long to shine on this dark world.

A YOUNG lady noticing a young man in the seat behind her in an Indianapolis church, thought she would faint away and let him catch her. She did so, and was carried out into the entry, when she opened her eyes to thank the young man, but found that the sexton and an old colored man had carried her out. To say that she was mad, would be too mild.

WHILE passing a house in Virginia, two drummers observed a very peculiar chimney, unfinished, and it attracting their attention, they asked a flaxen-haired urchin standing near the house if it "drew well," whereupon the aforesaid urchin replied: "Yes it draws the attention of all the fools that pass this road."

A YOUNG fellow having been charged with getting drunk the night before, and wishing to justify himself, declared that he never was drunk, nor never meant to be, for it always made him feel so bad the next morning.

"Who tempted Eve?" asked a Sunday school teacher of a young scholar. The little fellow, after a few moments thought with an air of confidence, exclaimed: "It's the gentleman who lives in H-1; I've forgotten his name."

"G. is so very close," was observed by B., who will squabble about a single cent. "Well," remarked W., "I have always thought that the less one squabbles about the better."

AN affected singer at a Dublin theatre was told by a wag in the gallery to "come out from behind his nose and sing his song like other people."

THERE is a couple of sisters who have to be told everything together, for they are so much alike that they can't be told apart.

If a person buys two apples and eats both, how many will yet remain? Of course, there will be two left.

It is vain to struggle against change and confusion. The whole world is turned upside down every twenty-four hours.

DIGGORY says he always respects old age except when some one attacks him with a pair of tough chickens.

DEFAULTERS don't always get rich, but by the time detectives look for them they are generally well off.

Exciting Encounter with a Horse.

The Montgomery (Mo.) Standard says: One of the most exciting scenes and terrible encounters that it has ever been our privilege to record, occurred at the ford near L'Outre last week. The facts, as we received from an eye witness are these:

On last Saturday evening, Thos. Moore and a gent man by the name of Thompson, residing in the lower L'Outre township, were returning home from Danville, and stopping at the ford of L'Outre, proposed to take a bath and water their horses. Mr. Moore was riding a very fractious mustang pony. He started into the water with her, and when he had ridden into where the water was deep enough to swim her, the pony commenced rearing and plunging, and finally succeeded in throwing Mr. Moore.

In the fall, Mr. Moore received an ugly wound on his right ankle and foot from a stroke of the fore-foot of the pony, which somewhat disabled him for a while. The pony reared up with her forefeet entirely out of the water, made a dart at Moore, which would have ended the fight then and there, had not Moore, quick as thought, darted under her body, came out in her rear, and made for the shore as fast as his hands and legs could carry him. The pony saw him, and with the blood running from her nostrils, in her fury and excitement, and the devil in her eyes, she wheeled and made another plunge at him, which was avoided by Moore diving under the water and swimming some distance under water.

This time Moore reached the bank in safety, but had no time to allow the grass to grow under his feet. The pony was after him immediately, and the exciting race took place on the bank for the distance of about fifty yards, when Moore was compelled to take to the water again to save his bacon. He seized a stout club and jumped off the bank into the deep water, the pony following. He swam rapidly to a log lying about midway in the creek, and mounting it, he gave the pony a severe blow as she came up in hot pursuit. This seemed to cool her excited feelings, and she started back for the shore. Now the pursued became the pursuer, and Moore soon overtaking the pony, mounted, and after administering several severe blows on the head of the pony with his club, succeeded in conquering her. The battle was short but severe. Moore says his pony may go dirty hereafter; he says he does not intend to wash her again by a swimming.

LIVING BEYOND THEIR MEANS.—Bulwer says that poverty is only an idea, nine cases out of ten. Some men with ten thousand dollars a year suffer more for the want of means than others with three hundred. The reason is, the richer man has artificial wants. His income is ten thousand, and he suffers enough for being dunned for unpaid debts to kill a sensitive man. A man who earns a dollar a day and does not run into debt, is the happier of the two. Very few people who have never been rich will believe this, but it is true. There are thousands and thousands with princely incomes who never know a moment's peace because they live above their means. There is really more happiness in the world among the working people than among those who are called rich.

This living beyond one's means, is the cause of more demoralization and woe in the human family than any other of those indiscretions in which it seems man is inclined to indulge. Especially is it so in the cities of the world where vicious temptations in so many varied forms abound. Bulwer, more than any other of the popular modern writers, seems to understand that poverty really is. He is poor who lives beyond his means, while he who lives within them is not. And this will apply to the millionaire, as well as to him who has to labor for his daily bread.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.—A Mrs. Chamberlain delivered the oration at Lakeville, Dakota county, Minnesota, on the Fourth of July.

The Cincinnati Methodist Conference has passed resolutions against Mrs. Van Cott's preaching, but she still holds to her own resolution to preach.

Judge Mrs. Esther Morris, of Wyoming, is getting on swimmingly in her official duties, which are rapidly increasing. She has lately married several couples.

One Mrs. Reade, living near the Bishop of Chester for refusing to consecrate an elaborately ornate church, which she built at a cost of $150,000.

The Lewiston (Me.) Journal says that a young woman, an operative in a factory in that city, who died suddenly on Sunday, had paid a mortgage of $500 on her father's farm, besides supporting herself.

Chesterfield, Illinois, has a girl who, on a two days trial, hoed more potato hills than either of her three brothers.

Female masons will be the next fust.

A writer says that "as compared with the German soldier, the Frenchman is as a billiard ball to a brick—the billiard ball all for motion, and the brick all for a stability, whether to stand by itself or to go into a solid wall."

We learn that a negro boy is now in jail charged with the murder of his brother, says the Newberry Herald of the 3d inst, which occurred in the following way: They were working in a gin house, when one said to the other, "why can't you work without carrying every other cart," whereupon the reproved one deliberately chopped the other in the head with a hoe, causing his death soon after.
